

Dynamic Forces Releases Which Cards? Witch Cards!

Witchblade began her entertainment dynasty with a comic book; then came trade paperbacks, then action figures, then a made-for-television film... and now, Sara Pezzini's future is in the cards!

The new Witchblade Millennium Trading Card Series, produced in limited quantities by Dynamic Forces (no more than seven hundred cases will be manufactured), is sure to appeal to fans of the comic book series, since the cards will feature art by some of Witchblade's most popular illustrators. "All the artists from original co-creator Mike Turner to Marc Silvestri are included," Dynamic Forces' Nick Barrucci said, "as well as Randy Green and Keu Cha. We also have new cards from the aforementioned artists. This is going to be an awesome series! Trust me, I've seen the art and the design! These are a compilation with new original card images, they are the best of the best." Some of the cards will even feature art taken from the hard-to-find alternate cover editions published over the years by Dynamic Forces.

To ensure that the series captured the look and feel of Top Cow's comic, Dynamic Forces worked closely with Top Cow. "They worked with us hand-in-hand. We hired, with Top Cow's permission, Peter Steigerwald to design the cards. Gino in our offices designed the binder (which comes with an exclusive card signed by Keu Cha), the wrappers, the ads and the boxes themselves. This worked out fantastically! We have a very close relationship with all of our licensors, and this is no exception! Steigerwald and [Top Cow's] Sonia Im were integral in the process of this series! Peter designed the entire set and Sonia made sure that everything worked as seamlessly as possible on the Top Cow end!"

The series came about, in part, because "we happened to be in the right place at the right time," Barrucci explained. "There hadn't been any Witchblade trading cards in a while, and we felt that if we created the correct product mix with a lot of bonus items for consumers that the cards would sell. Fortunately, we were right. The cards have done exceedingly well in preliminary sales. And I believe that fans will be ecstatic with the final product!"

The bonus items are the key as far as Barrucci is concerned; he wanted this series to stand out from the typical trading card line. "This is the fun part! Not only are there seventy-two base cards, six "Chrome" Chase cards, and six Glow-In-The-Dark Cards, but there are also fourteen signed cards—a thousand of each—plus eight creators who worked on sketch cards!!!!!! The people who signed include artists and writers who the fans are going to love! These include Jae Lee, Paul Jenkins, Jose Villarrubia, Christina Z, David Wohl, Jonathon D. Smith, Randy Green, Joe Jusko, model Julie Cialini (who modeled for Joe Jusko on the Witchblade piece), Matt Busch, Alex Horley, up-and-comer John Watson, as well as others! The original hand-drawn sketch cards—wonder what these will go for on E-Bay!?—we had hand drawn sketches by Jae Lee, Jose Villarrubia, Jonathon D. Smith, Randy Green, Matt Busch, Alex Horley and John Watson!"

The Witchblade Millennium Trading Card Series, offered in six-card packs and thirty-six pack boxes, are priced at $2.50 per pack; look for them in late October.

Love and Rockets, Stage Two!

One of the most popular series of the 1980s and the early 90s was Love and Rockets, the edgy, character-driven book by the Hernandez Brothers—Gilbert, Jaime, and Mario—that became Fantagraphics' flagship title. Five years ago, when the Hernandez Brothers ended the title and went on to separate projects, most fans thought they'd only be able to enjoy Love and Rockets in trade paperback reprint volumes. However, with a new millennium comes a new Love and Rockets by the same talented creators!

"Fantagraphics Books is proud and elated to announce the return, after a five-year hiatus, of the comic book that changed the industry forever," Eric Reynolds of Fantagraphics said, "reuniting all three Hernandez Brothers! Jaime picks up the newly-divorced Maggie's story as she returns to the old neighborhood to try to reconnect with her past; in the first issue she meets up with everyone's favorite Hoppers resident, Izzy Ortiz. Gilbert launches a thrilling new graphic novel, 'Julio's Day,' about a man's life from 1900 to 2000. Every person gets his day... or does he? Finally, Gilbert (artist) and Mario (writer) collaborate on 'Me for the Unknown,' a tale of political intrigue, dumping on the little guy, psychosis, and violent revenge reminiscent of some of their earliest Love and Rockets stories—or their Mister X Tales of Somnopolis' stories."

Fans know that they can expect Love and Rockets Volume II to be good—but they also know that they can't expect it to be particularly fast (quality takes time!). "This new series, which will be released on a three-times-a-year basis, should rope back in all those Hernandez fans who lost track of the Bros. when they were spread out over various mini-series and one-shots," Reynolds added, "and re-establish Love and Rockets as one of the best-selling and most beloved comics of the new millennium!"

Love and Rockets Volume II is slated to debut in January 2001; each 32-page issue, published on deluxe paper with cardstock covers, will carry a $3.95 pricetag.

Gaiman's Back in Action

Action Comics is well known to Superman fans as one of the four core Superman titles—but there was once a time when Superman played a much more minor role in the title. In the late 1980s, Action Comics was replaced for a time by Action Comics Weekly, an extra-length title that featured a variety of DC characters and concepts in serialized tales.

And thus began one of the stranger bits of DC history.

In looking for a storyline that could pull some of those diverse heroes together and unify Action Comics Weekly, a then-new writer named Neil Gaiman had a plan: a grand story arc focusing on Superman and Green Lantern that would also involve almost every other character featured in ACW, including the Phantom Stranger, Deadman, the Blackhawks, and many more.

Alas, the weekly was cancelled before the project reached fruition, and it seemed like this was a piece of DC history destined to be lost forever.

But Bob Schreck isn't the sort of editor to leave a project of that magnitude unfinished. When Schreck came to DC from Oni Press, he discovered the incomplete story and decided that 2000 was the year in which it should be completed. And even better, he called on some of the talented folks with whom he had a history to help add the pictures to Gaiman's story.

So what brings together such a strange mix of heroes? It begins when Hal Jordan and Clark Kent pay a visit to a Metropolis museum; what is supposed to be a pleasant diversion leads to an enigma when Hal discovers, among the museum's holdings, an ancient green lantern... a lantern that he is convinced is an old power battery. But where did it come from? Who wielded it previously? That leads to a grand journey within the battery itself, a journey that ranks among the strangest in Superman and Green Lantern's superhero careers.

Why did the story remain unpublished until now? According to Neil Gaiman, it wasn't just the end of Action Comics Weekly that resulted in the story being put on hold. "I'd written a story about Superman and the Hal Jordan Green Lantern as old friends, one of whom has problems, the other doesn't. It was decided the week after I'd written it that too many people knew Superman's secret identity and henceforth no one would know it," Gaiman explained. "The story didn't really work if they weren't old friends in their secret identities, so it was scrapped."

Green Lantern/Superman: Legends of the Green Flame, a $5.95 comic, is scheduled for November 8th release.

ULTIMATELY, A MAGAZINE—AND A COMICS LINE?

Currently, Marvel's Ultimate project is a single title; in December, it expands to two books. But what comes next? The short-term answer is simple: a magazine. The long-term answer? Well, Marvel has some thoughts on that as well!

As it turns out, the Ultimate package targeted at non-fans won't be a comic at all, but will be a standard-sized magazine instead. The magazine will include two comics' worth of comic book material along with teen-oriented material such as movie previews, music and video reviews, celebrity interviews, and more.

The first issue of the magazine will debut in mid-January, carrying a cover price of $3.99. The Ultimate Marvel Magazine #1 "debuts in the third week of January," Matt Ragone, Marvel Vice President Retail Sales, said. "It will be magazine sized at 7.25" wide x 10.88" high. It will not have card-stock covers. It will be 80 pages at $3.99. The Ultimate Marvel Magazine will revolutionize the comic book industry and will help to resolve two of the major issues facing comic book publishers: distribution and appeal to 'tweens and teens.' We recognize the difficulty some consumers currently face in finding the specialty stores to buy our comics. By developing the product in a magazine format we are able to ensure there will be ample distribution and that it will be available everywhere."

While the focus of the magazine remains on non-fans, the availability of this magazine to comic shoppers and Marvel fans is undecided as of yet. "This is still in discussion, but current plans call for the magazine not to be sold to [comic shops]," Ragone said. However, Bill Rosemann of Marvel added that this isn't finalized yet, and the option of offering it through comic shops is being considered (log on to the CSNsider website to cast your vote letting Marvel know if you think the magazine should be offered through comic shops!), as the demand for the material remains high.

What will the comics content of the magazine be? It appears that each issue will include focus entirely on one Ultimate title at a time; one issue will have all Spider-Man, the next will have all X-Men. Additionally, each issue will likely feature some comics material culled from mainline Marvel Universe titles, Bill Rosemann indicated. That should continue until a third Ultimate title is added to the line.

With two Ultimate titles already on the schedule—Ultimate Spider-Man and Ultimate X-Men—speculation is running rampant regarding that third Ultimate , which most likely will be a teamup book focusing on Spider-Man in action with other heroes in the Marvel Universe. This would offer a way to introduce readers to the full Marvel Universe, and to "ultimatize" other characters, without rolling out a huge line of titles, ironically echoing the way the Golden Age Sub-Mariner was introduced in the Marvel Universe in 1962 as a character in Fantastic Four without focusing on his backstory or history.

Ragone confirmed that a team-up title is in the development, although he added that it's "too soon for me to know a title." Contrary to some reports, these are not original stories being done for the Ultimate Marvel Magazine. "Like Ultimate Spider-Man, these should first appear as comics for the direct market," Ragone said. "Their inclusion in the magazine will follow their release as comics. That is the current plan, subject to change."

Work is already underway on the team-up title, although it doesn't have a firm release date yet. Brian Bendis, writer of Ultimate Spider-Man, is also writing the team-up title, which will learn him creatively with some talents not normally associated with Marvel. Grendel and Mage creator Matt Wagner said, "I'm slated to draw the first two-part storyline, which teams the Ultimate Spider-Man with the Ultimate Wolverine... their first meeting! And my first time drawing pages for Marvel after nearly twenty years in the biz!" Other creators who have signed on include Mike Allred (who will illustrate a Spider-Man/Iron Man storyline), Dan Brereton, and P. Craig Russell.

Marvel publisher Bill Jemas told CSN that, thanks to this Ultimate team-up title, "one way or another, lotsa characters will get the Ultimate treatment. Having said that, I don't think that we should do more than four Ultimate books each month or we may get too expensive for people who want to read the entire line...

"Title proliferation really hurts the business. I'm not saying that it would be bad for Marvel to publish a stronger, more diverse line of books—provided that every book is good, and there is a real story to tell.

"But we shouldn't just add so many Spidey and X-Men titles that we break the bank for a diehard fan who wants everything that we print about their favorite families. So, Ultimates may indeed end up replacing some time-worn titles," Jemas said, confirming speculation that some books might drop out of the regular Marvel lineup if the Ultimate approach succeeds.

Speculation has also centered on the next characters to be given the Ultimate treatment. CSNsider's own on-line survey showed the Fantastic Four to be the fan-favorite, and Jemas confirmed that the FF is high on the list. "With respect to the next book, [new editor-in-chief] Joe Quesada is looking at pitches from all of the upcoming films and TV shows," Jemas told CSNsider. "Right now, the fast moving movie projects are FF and Hulk, so that's the focus."

What about problematic characters like Captain America? If the Star-Spangled Avenger were "ultimatized," would Steve Rogers undergo his first transformation in modern times, or would the frozen Avenger not be thawed out until 2001? "Honestly, we have talked a lot about team-ups and not much at all about Captain America," Jemas said. "But, here's what I would suggest to Joe Q," he added, leading into a different take on the patriotic hero, one that isn't necessarily Ultimate-focused. "The old hero definitely could use a few new tricks, but the creative ideas can drive the branding. In other words, if we have a great/edgy idea, Cap could become a Marvel Knight. If the best concepts are more mainstream and very accessible to new readers, the books should be Ultimates."

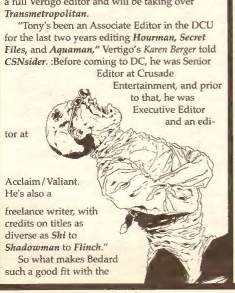

Will this book be available to comic shops? "Right now, it looks like we're leaning towards making it available on the newsstand only, but that's not definite yet," Rosemann told CSNsider. "We've had resistance from a lot of retailers to our X-Men Universe and Spider-Man Universe reprint titles and to our Backpack projects and to almost anything outside of standard comics. They tell us, 'We don't need this.' Right now, Bill Jemas is in favor of putting the magazine on the newsstand only." Rosemann did point out, though, that the final decision hasn't been made yet, and that could change.

TONY'S JUST GREAT ON TRANSMETROPOLITAN

Two weeks ago, CSNsider told you that Transmetropolitan editor Axel Alonso had left Vertigo for Marvel, where he is taking over the Spidey titles. Now comes the news that Tony Bedard, editor of Hourman, has been promoted to a full Vertigo editor and will be taking over Transmetropolitan.

"Tony's been an Associate Editor in the DCU for the last two years editing Hourman, Secret Files, and Aquaman," Vertigo's Karen Berger told CSNsider. "Before coming to DC, he was Senior Editor at Crusade Entertainment, and prior to that, he was Executive Editor and an editor at Acclaim/Valiant. He's also a freelance writer, with credits on titles as diverse as Shi to Shadowman to Flinch."

So what makes Bedard such a good fit with the Vertigo editorial staff? "He shares a similar sensibility to a lot of the material that we publish, particularly the crime fiction, war and western titles, and like every tried and true Vertigo editor, he wants to explore the many horrors of the modern day world. He also has already established relationships with many of the writers and artists he'll be working with at Vertigo." As to what titles he'll be working with in addition to Transmetropolitan, Berger said "Hellblazer, Codename: Knockout, Garth Ennis's war one-shots, to name but a few...

He already has great ideas for future projects, so don't be surprised for him to hit the ground running."

TMP MINUS BB

Brian Bendis has been generating a great deal of news with his work at Marvel—but at the same time he's been doing Ultimate Spider-Man, he's continued to work on his own Powers for Image, along with two books for Todd McFarlane Productions: Hellspawn and Sam & Twitch.

That's all changed.

"I am no longer working on Hellspawn or Sam & Twitch," Bendis told CSNsider. "My last issues will be Sam & Twitch #19 and Hellspawn #7. My work on these scripts is completed.

"I genuinely feel the work I did on the TMP books was up there with some of my best and I hope you all continue to support my work on those titles as they ship over the months.

"Let me clearly say that this turn of events in no way impacts my relationship with Image Central. It was Jim Valentino who brought me into Image many years ago. Way before I was courted by TMP, and I am happy to say my relationship with Image remains as strong and positive as it ever has. Powers, along with my assorted collected works and future projects, will continue unabated.

"I had a great time at TMP. It was a fun couple of years and it certainly helped to open up many other doors for me."

No word as to who will replace Bendis on the two titles—but Bendis's work should continue into early 2001 before readers see a new writer's work in either of these titles.

STRACZYNSKI ON THE WEB

J. Michael Straczynski has been confirmed as writer of Amazing Spider-Man beginning sometime next year, but the big question was, "when?" According to a posting from Straczynski in his rec.arts.sf.tv.babylon5.moderated Usenet newsgroup (accessible through the dejanews website as well as through newsgroup programs), "You can expect to see the first JMS-written issue of The Amazing Spider-Man probably around March or April of next year... As a longtime Spidey fan, this is something I'm looking forward to enormously."

ELLIS REINFORCES HIS IMAGE

Fan-fave writer Warren Ellis has confirmed that he'll be doing three new projects for Image Comics in 2001. Each of the series is non-superhero in nature and is designed to be read independently. The books are Black Horses, a supernatural crime tale illustrated by John Paul Leon (who should be familiar with the genre, having supplied the art for the outré Challengers of the Unknown); Ministry of Space, an alternate-history tale illustrated by Chris Weston; and Morning Dragons, a story of Vikings in Japan illustrated by Steve Lieber. No word on precise release schedule, formats, etc., yet—but as soon as the information is available, you'll read about it here!

NOVEMBER CHECKLIST

The following comics and comics-related books are tentatively slated for release on the dates given; if no date is listed, the publication is scheduled for release sometime during November. It's very common for items to be delayed for a variety of reasons, so none of these dates are guaranteed. For the latest information on shipping and publishing delays, talk to the friendly folks at the comic shop where you got this issue of CSN! While most comic shops get their books on Wednesdays, some shops might receive their shipments on a different date than the one listed. And yes, we are aware that some publishers regularly run an average of a month or so late on many of their titles—nevertheless, we go by the schedules they provide.

NOTE: At the request of many retailers, fans, and publisher, we have added Diamond Comic Distributors' code numbers after the publisher's name for each item. This way, if you're interested in an item that your friendly local comic shop doesn't routinely stock, you can tell them exactly how to locate and order it for you!
